Historical Geography, GIScience and Textual Analysis Charles Travis, Francis Ludlow, Ferenc Gyuris, 2020-02-29 This book illustrates how literature history and geographical analysis complement and enrich each other's disciplinary endeavors The Hun Lenox Globe constructed in 1510 contains the Latin phrase Hic sunt dracones Here be dragons warning sailors of the dangers of drifting into uncharted waters Nearly half a millennium earlier the practice of earth writing geographia emerged from the cloisters of the great library of Alexandria as a discipline blending the twin pursuits of Strabo's poetic impression of places and Herodotus chronicles of events and cultures Eratosthenes a librarian at Alexandria and the mathematician Ptolemy employed geometry as another language with which to pursue earth writing From this ancient East Mediterranean fount the streams of literary perception historical record and geographical analysis phenomenological and Euclidean found confluence The aim of this collection is to recover such means and seek the fount of such rich waters by exploring relations between historical geography geographic information science GIS geoscience and textual analysis The book discusses and illustrates current case studies trends and discourses in European American and Asian spheres where historical geography is practiced in concert with human and physical applications of GIS and the broader geosciences and the analysis of text broadly conceived as archival literary historical cultural climatic scientific digital cinematic and media Time as a multi scaled concept again broadly conceived is the pivot around which the interdisciplinary contributions to this volume revolve In The Landscape of Time 2002 the historian John Lewis Gaddis posits What if we were to think of history as a kind of mapping He links the ancient practice of mapmaking with the three part conception of time past present and future Gaddis presents the practices of cartography and historical narrative as attempts to manage infinitely complex subjects by imposing abstract grids to frame the phenomena being examined longitude and latitude to frame landscapes and occidental and oriental temporal scales to frame timescapes Gaddis contends that if the past is a landscape and history is the way we represent it

A reading of this book will leave you much better defended against cheap atlases, shoddy journalism, unscrupulous advertisers, predatory special interest groups and others who may use or abuse maps at your expense. John Van Pelt, Christian Science Monitor. Monmonier meets his goal admirably. His book should be put on every map user's must read list. It is informative and readable, a big step forward in helping us to understand how maps can mislead their readers. Jeffrey S. Murray, Canadian Geographic.

River Ganga P. L. Madan, 2005. The Western perception of India has varied widely since antiquity. Early Egyptians and Babylonians had a vague idea about the region. Greeks on the other hand were more aware of geographical perspectives and perceptions changed rapidly as science of cartography swiftly advanced. Means of collecting empirical cartogeographical data multiplied rapidly, map makers were kept busy. Many inaccuracies or fallacies crept in the early stages of map making, some inevitable, others not so. Map makers carried on with these inaccuracies not for years or decades but for centuries. In one map the author was surprised to see that a river Ganga shown flowing in the south central region of India and falling into the Bay of Bengal in Orissa. This river was south west of the great delta of the real Ganga or Ganges coming from the north west in Bengal, called Bengala in the map. Two Gangas or Ganges in one map. And this in the map by a well known map maker of the time. This was one of the reasons for the author's quest for early geographical literature to find out the reasons behind showing Ganga in peninsular India and the perpetuation of the fallacy for centuries by other respected cartographers as well. This important volume would go a long way in deciphering the mystery and fascination the Indian subcontinent, especially the holy river Ganga, has held for cartographers from time immemorial.

Mobile Mapping Clancy Wilmott, 2020. This book argues for a theory of mobile mapping, a situated and spatial approach towards researching how everyday digital mobile media practices are bound up in global systems of knowledge and power. Drawing from literature in media studies and geography and the work of Michel Foucault and Doreen Massey, it examines how geographical and historical material, social and cultural conditions are embedded in the way in which contemporary digital cartographies are read, deployed and engaged. This is explored through seventeen walking interviews in Hong Kong and Sydney as potent discourses like cartographic reason continue to transform and weave through the world in ways that haunt mobile mapping and bring old conflicts into new media. In doing so, Mobile Mapping offers an interdisciplinary rethinking about how multiple translations of spatial knowledges between rational digital epistemologies and tacit ways of understanding space and experience might be conceptualized and researched.
